Kommentar	This lecture series is aimed at introducing students to the literature and culture of the early modern period. Starting with an introduction to the European social and cultural history of the period from roughly 1400 to 1660, the lecture series looks at both the cultural context of the early modern period and specific works of - mostly - British literature including both fictional and non-fictional works. Authors, texts, and genres to be studied include the prose of Thomas Nashe and Thomas More; the sonnet cycles of Philip Sidney, Edmund Spenser, and William Shakespeare; Elizabethan dramas by Thomas Kyd, Christopher Marlowe, and William Shakespeare; the Jacobean playwrights John Fletcher, Ben Jonson, and John Webster; the so-called metaphysical poets John Donne, Andrew Marvell, and Henry Vaughan; and the poetological works of Sidney and George Puttenham. We will also occasionally take a European perspective by looking at developments outside of Britain, most notably the essays by Montaigne, Italian renaissance poetry and poetics, and Spanish theatre and prose. Regarding the larger historical context, we will have a look at early modern philosophies; the rise of humanism and the renaissance; the reformation; the exploration of the new world; and the development of early modern theatre companies, all of which have significantly influenced the production and reception of early modern literature. Readings:

Kommentar	This third installment of the four-part lecture series, A Cultural History of American Literature, is devoted to literary modernism. Key authors include Henry James, Edith Wharton, Abraham Cahan, Willa Cather, Amy Lowell, Gertrude Stein, Robert Frost, Sherwood Anderson, Wallace Stevens, William Carlos Williams, Eliot, Pound, H.D., Marianne Moore, Zora Neale Hurston, Fitzgerald, Hart Crane, Ernest Hemingway, Langston Hughes, John Steinbeck, and Richard Wright, among others. Much of the course will be devoted to fiction, but we will also spend a great deal of time discussing poetry, one of modernism's privileged literary genres and certainly a laboratory for the kind of formal experiments also taking place in painting, sculpture, photography, cinema, and music. A major theme will be the emergence of a recognizably international avant-garde, cosmopolitan in its orientation and often revolutionary in its politics, and dedicated to shocking the "philistines" and the "bourgeoisie" out of their social and cultural complacency. We will approach modernism as an oppositional culture that was fueled by many, sometimes contradictory oppositional stances. The artists of the Harlem Renaissance saw cultural representation as a means of achieving political representation for African Americans; many female artists advocated women's rights; a number of artists urged personal liberation in matters of sexuality and lifestyle; and while some looked forward to the communist revolution, others endorsed traditionalism and even fascism. This course is designed to give a sense of the urgency and diversity of an explosive half-century marked by extreme artistic innovation and torn apart by two world wars.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 200 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 10 November 2018 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. "The United States," writes historian Richard Hofstadter, "was born in the country and has moved to the city" (Age of Reform 23). Hofstadter's comment on America's long-term transformation from an agrarian state to an urban-industrial nation frames this seminar's key interest: the cultural debate that accompanied the process of urbanization in the U.S. from the late eighteenth to the early twentieth centuries. For proponents of urban growth, cities often represented modern progress that spurred technological innovation and democratization. For opponents, however, urban centers were frequently manifestations of vice, corruption, alienation, and moral degradation and thus a direct opposite of the mystified/agrarian ideal of country life.

In this seminar, we will analyze these ambivalent attitudes expressed by writers, politicians, intellectuals, and architects in autobiographical, political, and non-fictional texts such as Thomas Jefferson's Notes on the State of Virginia, Henry D. Thoreau's Walden, Henry Adams's Education, Henry James's The American Scene, and Jane Addams's Twenty Years at Hull House, among others. During close readings of these texts, we will discuss a tradition of skepticism and animosity against the city in American culture, but also one of progressive hope. Throughout the semester, students will thus examine a complex history of (anti-) urbanism in America that highlights class, ethnic, and regional issues of urbanization.

Reading material will be posted on StudIP at the beginning of the semester.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. Kommentar

The two-semester lecture series aims at introducing students to major approaches, traditions, and key figures in the fields of cultural and media theory. The second part of the lecture series, "Approaches and Methods in Media Studies," will focus on media theory, visual culture, material culture and cultural studies. The lecture will be concerned with media history, the relation between (mass) media and society, media aesthetics, models of communication, and questions of cultural memory, technology, materiality and embodiment. Other relevant issues are medial configurations of time and space, networks and systems, concepts of hyperreality, postmodernity and the digital. We will also consider theories of single media: photography, the cinema, television, the computer and mobile media.

The lecture will introduce a number of key texts and major schools that have been influential in the development of critical media and cultural studies: The Toronto School, the Frankfurt School, German media theory, British Cultural Studies, theories of postmodernism and visual culture, film and television theory, theories of material culture, systems theory, and actor-network theory.

Individual lectures are concerned with selected key thinkers, such as Theodor W. Adorno, Walter Benjamin, Jean Baudrillard, Bill Brown, James Carey, Richard Dyer, John Fiske, Stuart Hall, Mark Hansen, Miriam Hansen, Donna Haraway, Katherine Hayles, Max Horkheimer, Harold Innis, Fredric Jameson, Friedrich Kittler, Bruno Latour, Marshall McLuhan, Jason Mittell, Laura Mulvey, John Durham Peters, Claude Shannon, Raymond Williams, or Geoffrey Winthrop-Young.

The texts for this class will be made available on Stud.IP.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 40 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

This - voluntary but highly recommended - tutorial is taught in conjunction with the class "Introducing Critical Theory II" (modules: B.AS.04; B.AS.301; M.EP.01b; M.EP01b-L). The tutorial provides an opportunity to discuss the texts covered in the course, to address questions and to support the comprehension of the theories and critical concepts in question by means of close readings and in-depth discussion. Difficulties and questions regarding the theoretical texts can be addressed and revisited according to students' needs. Hence participating in the tutorial will also be helpful as a preparation for the final exam in the Critical Theory class.

Further material will be provided on Stud.IP.

Details about the organization of this tutorial will be announced in the first session.

Please register on Stud.IP between 01 September and 10 November 2018. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester.

Kommentar	This survey lecture offers an advanced survey over all fields in linguistics, the phenomena about language that we want to understand, and proposals on how grammar and meaning interact in our minds. We are open to requests to revisit specific parts of linguistic theory which you may need in order to write your term paper in your Master Seminar.  The lecture contains two units: one on morphosyntax, and one on semantics and pragmatics. You can attend one of these two units, or take the full class — a detailed program of times and topics will be presented in the first session(s) of winter term.

Kommentar	This course discusses several issues regarding how grammar interacts with context. We will begin by detailing Stalnaker's classic view of what context is and setting it in relation to compositional semantics. Among the topics discussed will be indexicality, context-shift in embedded clauses, the de se phenomenon, the triggering and the projection problems of presuppositions and anaphoric dependencies without c-command.

Kommentar	A prominent line of inquiry in linguistic research concerns the question of mapping between form and meaning. In this respect, the phenomenon of agreement poses potential challenges for the form-meaning correspondence insofar as the same semantic/grammatical feature has multiple realizations throughout the clause without triggering multiple semantic effects. For instance, in languages with negative concord, there can be multiple negative elements in a sentence, but negation is interpreted only once. The same holds for other cases of agreement, such as subject-verb agreement, adjective-noun concord, etc. In this course, we will first present the landscape of agreement phenomena from a typological perspective. Based on this, we will then discuss various theories of agreement that have been proposed in the literature.

Kommentar

As humans, we have remarkable linguistic abilities: we are able to understand an unlimited number of sentences, including sentences that we haven't heard before. The knowledge that allows us to accomplish this incredible feat is largely unconscious. In this class, we will aim to uncover this knowledge by formulating and testing hypotheses about the interpretation of sentences and their parts. At different points in the class, we may make connections with related fields, like language acquisition. This class will suit you if you are interested in linguistic meaning, are keen on analytical thinking and enjoy theory-building. Regular class participation and class homework are required.

This survey lecture offers an advanced survey over all fields in linguistics, the phenomena about language that we want to understand, and proposals on how grammar and meaning interact in our minds. We are open to requests to revisit specific parts of linguistic theory which you may need in order to write your term paper in your Master Seminar.

The lecture contains two units: one on morphosyntax, and one on semantics and pragmatics. You can attend one of these two units, or take the full class — a detailed program of times and topics will be presented in the first session(s) of winter term.

Kommentar

In literature, (most) text types, or genres, can be identified fairly easily. For instance, a poem is a sonnet if it adheres to a well-defined set of features. In daily life, we experience hardly any difficulties to identify a given text as letter, obituary or joke. On closer inspection, it may, however, be quite difficult to name and describe all of their characteristics. Therefore, the first objective of this seminar is to enable us to analyse texts and categorise them accordingly. The second objective of the course is to ask questions such as the following. Which text types exists in English? Which text types existed in Old and Middle English? Did they change over time and, if so, how? By answering these and other questions, we might learn, for instance, what distinguished an Anglo-Saxon writ from a regol or tæcing. This will yield a general understanding of text types and what they tell us about the culture in which they are found.

Kommentar	There are different consequences of language contact. There is, for instance, language mixture, i.e. two languages combine in various ways to form what is called a pidgin language. Another consequence is very serious. Language contact might mean language death for one of the involved languages. On a lighter note, one could answer the question "What are consequences of language contact?": English . Why? Because English "has been contact-derived from its very beginnings onwards" (Hundt/Schreier 2013: 1). So, in this course we should like to look at various contact scenarios and what impact these had in the development of certain structural features of English.

Kommentar	In the introduction to Ishtla Singh's textbooks, the history of the English language is likened to a "rags-to-riches story of the language with humble and savage beginnings which grew to become the medium of literary genius for Chaucer, Shakespeare and Milton and, eventually, to conquer the globe" (2005: 1). However, what if we let English, the language, tell that story? This is what the lecture attempts to do. We turn to texts such as the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle , the Orrmulum , Trevisa's translation of the Polychronicon , or Puttenham's Arte of Poesie , circumnavigate their authors and try to listen to what the language itself is able to tell. In doing so, not only will we learn about noticeable features of Old, Middle, and Early Modern English, but also about crucial developments that changed English from a bold synthetic Germanic language into a Romanised analytic one.

Kommentar This fundamental course intends to develop and improve your critical competence as well as translation skills in the study of medieval English literature. We will be working with a range of set texts from the entire medieval period (e.g. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Bede's Account of Caedmon, The Dream of the Rood, or Chaucer's Franklin's Tale) and introduce you to the analysis of the lexical, formal, stylistic, and cultural aspects of various genres of medieval writing. The intensive study and discussion of limited selections of texts will develop your close commentary skills. You will also have the opportunity to have a brief look at manuscript sources. First session attendance is mandatory.

In literature, (most) text types, or genres, can be identified fairly easily. For instance, a poem is a sonnet if it adheres to a well-defined set of features. In daily life, we experience hardly any difficulties to identify a given text as letter, obituary or joke. On closer inspection, it may, however, be quite difficult to name and describe all of their characteristics. Therefore, the first objective of this seminar is to enable us to analyse texts and categorise them accordingly. The second objective of the course is to ask questions such as the following. Which text types exists in English? Which text types existed in Old and Middle English? Did they change over time and, if so, how? By answering these and other questions, we might learn, for instance, what distinguished an Anglo-Saxon writ from a regol or tæcing. This will yield a general understanding of text types and what they tell us about the culture in which they are found.

Kommentar	There are different consequences of language contact. There is, for instance, language mixture, i.e. two languages combine in various ways to form what is called a pidgin language. Another consequence is very serious. Language contact might mean language death for one of the involved languages. On a lighter note, one could answer the question "What are consequences of language contact?": English . Why? Because English "has been contact-derived from its very beginnings onwards" (Hundt/Schreier 2013: 1). So, in this course we should like to look at various contact scenarios and what impact these had in the development of certain structural features of English.

Kommentar In the introduction to Ishtla Singh's textbooks, the history of the English language is likened to a "rags-to-riches story of the language with humble and savage beginnings which grew to become the medium of literary genius for Chaucer, Shakespeare and Milton and, eventually, to conquer the globe" (2005: 1). However, what if we let English, the language, tell that story? This is what the lecture attempts to do. We turn to texts such as the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, the Orrmulum, Trevisa's translation of the Polychronicon, or Puttenham's Arte of Poesie, circumnavigate their autors and try to listen to what the language itself is able to tell. In doing so, not only will we learn about noticeable features of Old, Middle, and Early Modern English, but also about crucial developments that changed English from a bold synthetic Germanic language into a Romanised analytic one.

Kommentar Dealing with such a simple product only consisting of ink on paper, the book or literature industry has played a critical role in enabling the world to advance to how we know it today. Driven by new technologies and influenced by various factors, it is undergoing change today. This course will examine the literature industry, from its beginnings until today, the factors, which helped shape it and its underlying practices; aiming to answer the overall question: What is the business of literature? We will begin by looking at the relationships of authors, readers and texts. Dealing with theoretical background, we will also look at how it developed historically. Furthermore, this course will also provide an overview of the buying, selling and writing of books as well as its close ties with marketing and consumption of literature such as literary festivals, book towns and others.

This course is taught as a Blockseminar. Therefore, please reserve the following dates: An introduction meeting will be held on October 19 2018 from 2-4pm; followed by class meetings on 23./24. November 2018, 14./15. December 2018 and 18./19. January 2019. At present a schedule of Friday afternoons and Saturday full days is planned.

All students are expected to attend each session and to give a presentation in class as part of a group work.

Reading: Readings will be available for download on StudIP.

Registration: via Stud.IP 1 September to 1 October.

On November 11, 2018, the centenary of Armistice Day - the day when World War One ended - will be commemorated all over the world. It holds a special place in the British cultural memory, because it shaped the forms in which future wars would be remembered. This lecture series will look at the ways in which both world wars were experienced, imagined, performed and reflected in British poetry, novels, autobiographies and films, and how they were remembered in cultural practices. Topics include war myths, war propaganda and anti-propaganda, the role of women, British masculinity and national identity (eg. "Two World Wars, One World Cup"), the representation of the wars and their iconographies in the British public sphere, as well as war parodies, war re-enactments and war tourism.

A "Required Reading" list for BA and MA students will be available on StudIP.

Kommentar	When Samuel Johnson criticised John Donne for "the most heterogeneous ideas yoked together", he might have been thinking about Donne's poem "The Flea". Here the speaker argues that a lady should make love with him because the flea, which had just bitten them both, already unites their blood in its body. As this union is commonly not regarded as a sin, why should their love-making be? Poems such as these are typical for "The Metaphysicals", a group of poets (John Donne, Andrew Marvell, George Herbert, Thomas Carew and others) who explored life's dualities in subtle and argumentative poetry, trying to resolve the dichotomies of body and soul, passion and reason, carnal and divine, time and eternity or sin and redemption into unity or at least a compromise. Their works, written in the early seventeenth century, are distinguished by their intellectual complexity, concise expression, and often surprising, even shocking images.

This course will introduce students to a diverse range of metaphysical poets and their works, contextualise them in the religious and intellectual debates of the seventeenth century, and address their reception history.

Readings: Seventeenth-Century British Poetry, 1603-1660. ed. Gregory Chaplin and John P. Rumrich, Norton Critical Edition, 2006.

Kommentar

Genealogical narratives belong to the oldest literary formats, reflecting the human need to know about one's origin. Equally important is genealogy in law: in the Judeo-Christian tradition, ancestry and kinship are synonymous with blood relations. This traditional understanding of kinship has become contested not only recently by new reproduction technologies. The institution of adoption has always served as an exemplary practice to define kinship outside biological determinism. This course, co-taught by Professor Kroppenberg (History of Law) and Professor Schaff (British Literature) will discuss twentieth-century adoption narratives from the perspectives of law and literature, exploring the representation of kinship and identity. Students are invited to join interdisciplinary tandem teams, looking at the texts (novels and poetry) from a legal as well as a literary angle. Although some of the texts were not originally written in English, all are available in English translations. Please note however, that the course may involve some discussions in German, and therefore a good command of spoken German is recommended.

Readings: Atwood, Margaret: The Handmaid's Tale (1985); Brodkey, Harold: Stories in an Almost Classical Mode (1988); Drabble, Margaret: The Red Queen - A Transcultural Tragicomedy (2004); Ginzburg, Natalia: Le voci della sera (1961); Huston, Nancy: Lignes de faille (2006)/Fault Lines (2007); July, Miranda: The First Bad Man (2015); Kay, Jackie: The Adoption Papers (1991); Millás, Juan José: Dos mujeres en Praga (2002); White, Patrick: The Vivisector (1970); Winterson, Jeanette: Oranges Are Not the Only Fruit (1985).

Kommentar In this seminar we will look at the two world wars from an unusual angle, focusing less on Eurocentric or Europe-centred versions of these historical events than on war events that happened in or were perceived from the peripheries. The narratives to be explored address, for instance, war-related action not only in Europe but also in the Far East or North America, they concentrate e.g. on Australian nurses, Maori soldiers, or Japanese Canadian internees, or they highlight, as one of the consequences of the wars, the establishment and spread of a memorial culture. Among the topics we will investigate in our discussions are the following: the fictional representations of historical characters, settings, and events; the historical events as seen from a postcolonial perspective; and the re-appropriation of voice through revisiting imaginatively the past.

Readings: Thomas Keneally, The Daughters of Mars (2012); Jane Urquhart, The Stone Carvers (2001); Patricia Grace, Tu (2004); Richard Flanagan, The Narrow Road to the Deep North (2014); Frances Itani, Requiem (2011); Mary Ann Shaffer, The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society (2008).

Kommentar According to literary scholar Donald Pizer, American literary naturalism explores "those qualities of man usually associated with the heroic or adventurous, such as acts of violence and passion which involve sexual adventure or bodily strength and which culminate in desperate moments and violent death. A naturalistic novel is thus an extension of realism only in the sense that both modes often deal with the local and contemporary. The naturalist, however, discovers in this material the extraordinary and excessive in human nature." (Pizer, Realism and Naturalism in Nineteenth-Century American Fiction, p. 10).
 In this class we will read key works of that literary tradition, discuss them against the backdrop of their specific cultural and historical context, and explore their philosophical implications. The reading list will include (but is not limited to) texts such as Stephen Crane's Maggie: A Girl of the Streets (1893), Frank Norris's McTeague (1899), or Jack London's The Sea-Wolf (1904). (Please note that this list is tentative and might be subject to change! The definitive reading list will be provided at the beginning of the semester.)

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar

"I work all night, I work all day, to pay the bills I have to pay - Ain't it sad; And still there ne-ver seems to be a single penny left for me - That's too bad; In my dreams I have a plan - If I got me a wealthy man; I wouldn't have to work at all, I'd fool around and have a ball. Mo-ney, money, money - Must be funny - In the rich man's world!"

Thus run the lyrics of Abba's popular song Money, Money, Money of 1976. These lines engage with the idea of money related to work, toilsome endeavor to make it from 'rags-to-riches', dreams, entertainment and pleasure, as well as gendered discourses (here: a female in search of a wealthy man who uplifts her socially). With that, the song introduces a number of issues that are squarely situated in American culture and literature: the significance of finance, economic conditions, and class and their impact on the pursuit of happiness and the American Dream.

This class sets out to discuss 'money' in recent American literature and film, focusing on representations of the (American/ized) world of finance in the culture of the 1980s to the present.

How have the concepts of rags-to-riches and the American Dream been negotiated and developed against the backdrop of politico-economic trends and sociocultural conditions of the period? How exactly have authors and filmmakers discussed events such as stock market crashes and financial crises of the late 80s and the new millennium? How have the "new economy", yuppie culture, as well the interconnection of art and culture on the one hand, and capitalism and the economy on the other hand been addressed in a variety of texts of these decades? How 'gendered' and 'ethnic' has the representation of money been? And how has it affected the formation of (American) identity?

In order to trace these questions, we will investigate theoretical texts that engage with the interlinkage of culture and finance/capitalism (such as by Pierre Bourdieu or Fredric Jameson) and then relate those to selected writings and films of the 1980s to the present. Discussions of fiction will include Tom Wolfe's The Bonfire of the Vanities (1987), Don De Lillo's Cosmopolis (2003), Jane Smiley's Good Faith (2003), David Denby's American Sucker (2004), or Martha McPhee's Dear Money (2010). We will most likely analyze Wall Street (1987), its sequel Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps (2010), and A Perfect Murder (1998) as filmic representations of the 'money matter.'

A number of readings will come in the form of excerpts or single chapters; most texts will be made available in an e-reader via Stud.IP, but you are asked to purchase the three novels which we will discuss in full length:

Tom Wolfe's The Bonfire of the Vanities (1987; Vintage edition preferred), Don De Lillo's Cosmopolis (2003; Picador edition preferred), and Martha McPhee's Dear Money (2010; Mariner edition preferred).

Note: Since especially Wolfe's novel The Bonfire of the Vanities is rather voluminous, you might want to consider reading this book already during the semester break.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP.

Kommentar This course discusses several issues regarding how grammar interacts with context. We will begin by detailing Stalnaker's classic view of what context is and setting it in relation to compositional semantics. Among the topics discussed will be indexicality, context-shift in embedded clauses, the de se phenomenon, the triggering and the projection problems of presuppositions and anaphoric dependencies without c-command.

Kommentar	A prominent line of inquiry in linguistic research concerns the question of mapping between form and meaning. In this respect, the phenomenon of agreement poses potential challenges for the form-meaning correspondence insofar as the same semantic/grammatical feature has multiple realizations throughout the clause without triggering multiple semantic effects. For instance, in languages with negative concord, there can be multiple negative elements in a sentence, but negation is interpreted only once. The same holds for other cases of agreement, such as subject-verb agreement, adjective-noun concord, etc. In this course, we will first present the landscape of agreement phenomena from a typological perspective. Based on this, we will then discuss various theories of agreement that have been proposed in the literature.

Kommentar In literature, (most) text types, or genres, can be identified fairly easily. For instance, a poem is a sonnet if it adheres to a well-defined set of features. In daily life, we experience hardly any difficulties to identify a given text as letter, obituary or joke. On closer inspection, it may, however, be quite difficult to name and describe all of their characteristics. Therefore, the first objective of this seminar is to enable us to analyse texts and categorise them accordingly. The second objective of the course is to ask questions such as the following. Which text types exists in English? Which text types existed in Old and Middle English? Did they change over time and, if so, how? By answering these and other questions, we might learn, for instance, what distinguished an Anglo-Saxon writ from a regol or tæcing. This will yield a general understanding of text types and what they tell us about the culture in which they are found.

Kommentar	There are different consequences of language contact. There is, for instance, language mixture, i.e. two languages combine in various ways to form what is called a pidgin language. Another consequence is very serious. Language contact might mean language death for one of the involved languages. On a lighter note, one could answer the question "What are consequences of language contact?": English . Why? Because English "has been contact-derived from its very beginnings onwards" (Hundt/Schreier 2013: 1). So, in this course we should like to look at various contact scenarios and what impact these had in the development of certain structural features of English.

Kommentar The colloquium is designed to help BA- and MA-level students who are in the process of writing—or thinking about—the theses (BA-Arbeit/MA-Arbeit) necessary for the completion of their degrees. Students will have the opportunity to present their work-in-progress to their peers. Many sessions will be devoted to discussing student work. Other sessions will deal with topics in academic research and writing. We will also discuss current trends and methods in American studies and in critical theory. Students are invited to propose their own topics and texts for general discussion. Please get your suggestions to me as soon as possible so I can try to include them in the syllabus.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact Prof. Gross before the beginning of the semester.

Please also note that we recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar	This course discusses several issues regarding how grammar interacts with context. We will begin by detailing Stalnaker's classic view of what context is and setting it in relation to compositional semantics. Among the topics discussed will be indexicality, context-shift in embedded clauses, the de se phenomenon, the triggering and the projection problems of presuppositions and anaphoric dependencies without c-command.

Kommentar A prominent line of inquiry in linguistic research concerns the question of mapping between form and meaning. In this respect, the phenomenon of agreement poses potential challenges for the form-meaning correspondence insofar as the same semantic/grammatical feature has multiple realizations throughout the clause without triggering multiple semantic effects. For instance, in languages with negative concord, there can be multiple negative elements in a sentence, but negation is interpreted only once. The same holds for other cases of agreement, such as subject-verb agreement, adjective-noun concord, etc. In this course, we will first present the landscape of agreement phenomena from a typological perspective. Based on this, we will then discuss various theories of agreement that have been proposed in the literature.

Kommentar	Where do new words come from? How are words put together? After introducing the terms and concepts necessary for analyzing the internal structure of words this course focuses on topics such as mental lexicon, derivation, compounding, inflection, productivity, and the interface of morphology with syntax and phonology. What are constraints on word formation? Where do morphological processes take place? Different theoretical approaches propose different answers to these questions.

Kommentar	The linguistic term root has two different meanings in syntactic analysis. First, the root is the most embedded element in a structure. Second, the highest node in a structure is called the root . For instance, in the question above the lexical item root , the lowest element makes up a root and the highest node, CP, is called the root node. Interestingly, these elements mark the bottom and the top of a structure built by means of the syntactic operation Merge. Consequently, it makes sense to investigate roots in both senses. Together, we will examine which role roots play in the derivation of a sentence and how they are rooted in a minimalist setting.
	Everyone is welcome to join us in class to get further rooted in minimalist thinking.

Kommentar This course does not require any previous knowledge about neuroscience or brain anatomy. After a brief introduction to the fundaments of brain morphology and physiology, we will discuss some of the most relevant works in neuroscience related to the areas of generative linguistics, such as Phonology, Syntax, Semantics and Pragmatics. Fundamental questions about how language is housed in the human brain will be addressed such as: a) how does the brain process spoken language b) what areas/networks are functionally specialised in phonological, syntactic and semantic processing c) how much do we know about the relationship between theoretical linguistics and neuroscience.

Kommentar	There are different consequences of language contact. There is, for instance, language mixture, i.e. two languages combine in various ways to form what is called a pidgin language. Another consequence is very serious. Language contact might mean language death for one of the involved languages. On a lighter note, one could answer the question "What are consequences of language contact?": English . Why? Because English "has been contact-derived from its very beginnings onwards" (Hundt/Schreier 2013: 1). So, in this course we should like to look at various contact scenarios and what impact these had in the development of certain structural features of English.

Kommentar	This five-day fieldtrip seminar is offered as an extra supplement (6 credits) in connection with an Aufbaumodul for M.A.-students and will take you to an international research library. You will receive an introduction to the study of original medieval manuscripts, their description, dating, transcription, conservation and exhibition. The trip further includes visits to an academic publisher and a range of historical sites relevant to Medieval English Studies. We invite you to present your experience and impressions in the form of videos, blogs, photographic exhibitions and reports. This year's fieldtrip will lead us to Vercelli (Italy) where we have access to manuscripts from c. 350-1550 AD. At least 70% of student funding has been secured for this trip.

N.B.: You must be a student enrolled in M.EP.11 to take this trip. Prerequisite to M.EP.11 is the successful completion of both M.EP.02(b) and M.EP.05.

Kommentar	Dealing with such a simple product only consisting of ink on paper, the book or literature industry has played a critical role in enabling the world to advance to how we know it today. Driven by new technologies and influenced by various factors, it is undergoing change today. This course will examine the literature industry, from its beginnings until today, the factors, which helped shape it and its underlying practices; aiming to answer the overall question: What is the business of literature? We will begin by looking at the relationships of authors, readers and texts. Dealing with theoretical background, we will also look at how it developed historically. Furthermore, this course will also provide an overview of the buying, selling and writing of books as well as its close ties with marketing and consumption of literature such as literary festivals, book towns and others.

This course is taught as a Blockseminar. Therefore, please reserve the following dates: An introduction meeting will be held on October 19 2018 from 2-4pm; followed by class meetings on 23./24. November 2018, 14./15. December 2018 and 18./19. January 2019. At present a schedule of Friday afternoons and Saturday full days is planned.

All students are expected to attend each session and to give a presentation in class as part of a group work.

Reading: Readings will be available for download on StudIP.

Registration: via Stud.IP 1 September to 1 October.

Module	M.EP.06a.Mp: Anglistische Literatur- und Kulturwissenschaft - Abschlussmodul
Kommentar	This is for students wishing to do the Abschlussmodul M.EP.06a. The idea is for you to register in Flexnow under this "course" for the oral exam. It is your responsibility to get in contact with the actual instructor with whom you wish to do the oral exam, and work out all the details directly with them regarding your work and the oral exam you will be taking. The date you see here is a "dummy" date (because the system requires a date). Your actual oral exam will most likely be on a different date!

Kommentar According to literary scholar Donald Pizer, American literary naturalism explores "those qualities of man usually associated with the heroic or adventurous, such as acts of violence and passion which involve sexual adventure or bodily strength and which culminate in desperate moments and violent death. A naturalistic novel is thus an extension of realism only in the sense that both modes often deal with the local and contemporary. The naturalist, however, discovers in this material the extraordinary and excessive in human nature." (Pizer, Realism and Naturalism in Nineteenth-Century American Fiction, p. 10).
 In this class we will read key works of that literary tradition, discuss them against the backdrop of their specific cultural and historical context, and explore their philosophical implications. The reading list will include (but is not limited to) texts such as Stephen Crane's Maggie: A Girl of the Streets (1893), Frank Norris's McTeague (1899), or Jack London's The Sea-Wolf (1904). (Please note that this list is tentative and might be subject to change! The definitive reading list will be provided at the beginning of the semester.)

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP.

Independent Study: Please note that this class also has independent study components (as part of modules B.AS.401; B.AS.402; B.EP.51; M.EP.04b).

Kommentar	"I work all night, I work all day, to pay the bills I have to pay - Ain't it sad; And still there never seems to be a single penny left for me - That's too bad; In my dreams I have a plan - If I got me a wealthy man; I wouldn't have to work at all, I'd fool around and have a ball. Money, money, money - Must be funny - In the rich man's world!" Thus run the lyrics of Abba's popular song Money, Money, Money of 1976. These lines engage with the idea of money related to work, toilsome endeavor to make it from 'rags-to-riches', dreams, entertainment and pleasure, as well as gendered discourses (here: a female in search of a wealthy man who uplifts her socially). With that, the song introduces a number of issues that are squarely situated in American culture and literature: the significance of finance, economic conditions, and class and their impact on the pursuit of happiness and the American Dream. This class sets out to discuss 'money' in recent American literature and film, focusing on representations of the (American/ized) world of finance in the culture of the 1980s to the present.

How have the concepts of rags-to-riches and the American Dream been negotiated and developed against the backdrop of politico-economic trends and sociocultural conditions of the period? How exactly have authors and filmmakers discussed events such as stock market crashes and financial crises of the late 80s and the new millennium? How have the "new economy", yuppie culture, as well the interconnection of art and culture on the one hand, and capitalism and the economy on the other hand been addressed in a variety of texts of these decades? How 'gendered' and 'ethnic' has the representation of money been? And how has it affected the formation of (American) identity?

In order to trace these questions, we will investigate theoretical texts that engage with the interlinkage of culture and finance/capitalism (such as by Pierre Bourdieu or Fredric Jameson) and then relate those to selected writings and films of the 1980s to the present. Discussions of fiction will include Tom Wolfe's The Bonfire of the Vanities (1987), Don De Lillo's Cosmopolis (2003), Jane Smiley's Good Faith (2003), David Denby's American Sucker (2004), or Martha McPhee's Dear Money (2010). We will most likely analyze Wall Street (1987), its sequel Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps (2010), and A Perfect Murder (1998) as filmic representations of the 'money matter.'

A number of readings will come in the form of excerpts or single chapters; most texts will be made available in an e-reader via Stud.IP, but you are asked to purchase the three novels which we will discuss in full length:

Tom Wolfe's The Bonfire of the Vanities (1987; Vintage edition preferred), Don De Lillo's Cosmopolis (2003; Picador edition preferred), and Martha McPhee's Dear Money (2010; Mariner edition preferred).

Note: Since especially Wolfe's novel The Bonfire of the Vanities is rather voluminous, you might want to consider reading this book already during the semester break.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP.

Independent Study: Please note that this class also has independent study components (as part of modules B.AS.401; B.AS.402; B.EP.51; M.EP.04b).

Kommentar The colloquium is designed to help BA- and MA-level students who are in the process of writing—or thinking about—the theses (BA-Arbeit/MA-Arbeit) necessary for the completion of their degrees. Students will have the opportunity to present their work-in-progress to their peers. Many sessions will be devoted to discussing student work. Other sessions will deal with topics in academic research and writing. We will also discuss current trends and methods in American studies and in critical theory. Students are invited to propose their own topics and texts for general discussion. Please get your suggestions to me as soon as possible so I can try to include them in the syllabus.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact Prof. Gross before the beginning of the semester.

Please also note that we recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2018 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar	This course is primarily meant for students preparing or writing a Bachelor or Master thesis in linguistics.  The idea of the course is twofold. First, you will get help with some formal details. We will for instance address questions such as How can I find a topic in linguistics? , How can I organize my working? How should I structure my paper? We will read and discuss some helpful papers on linguistic theory and methodological issues. Second, you should have a forum where we might discuss papers you are interested in or you can present own ideas. Candidates may give a short talk concerning purpose, structure and first parts of their work to get some feedback from other participants in class in a relaxed atmosphere without any stress.  According to the examination regulations for the Master program and the Master of Education program students are obliged to attend the colloquium as part of their Abschlussmodul .  Of course every student interested in the issues mentioned above is invited to attend this class and join us.

Kommentar There are different consequences of language contact. There is, for instance, language mixture, i.e. two languages combine in various ways to form what is called a pidgin language. Another consequence is very serious. Language contact might mean language death for one of the involved languages. On a lighter note, one could answer the question "What are consequences of language contact?": English. Why? Because English "has been contact-derived from its very beginnings onwards" (Hundt/Schreier 2013: 1). So, in this course we should like to look at various contact scenarios and what impact these had in the development of certain structural features of English.

Kommentar	This is an intermediate - advanced English language course ( Vertiefungsmodul ). The main aim of the course is to increase and improve your active vocabulary in selected fields, e.g. politics, idioms, travel and transport, medical English, and the media. In class, you will be asked to give a presentation on your selected field and to encourage class participants to learn the new vocabulary by actively using it in class, e.g. in a dialogue, cloze text, role play, etc. In addition, we will also focus on various aspects of vocabulary and vocab learning, e.g. translation, example, special features, etc. The course book is Advanced Vocabulary in Use , Michael McCarthy, Felicity O'Dell, but you do not need to buy it - there are copies in the departmental library. N.B. Kommentar We will attempt to find themes, motifs, and resonances within the tradition of public American rhetoric from colonial times to the present day. From John Winthrop and Jonathan Edwards to Martin Luther King, Jr., and Barack Obama, there have been reiterations of specific ideas regarding what America means and represents in the American mind. What are they? Special attention will be given to Abraham Lincoln and his particular importance within this tradition. We will emphasize the sermons and speeches themselves rather than secondary sources, so that we can attempt to grasp the cadences of American rhetoric within the context of both history and the American language as a whole.

Nachweis Prüfung: Klausur (90 Min.) oder Essay (ca. 8 Seiten) oder Präsentation mit anschließender Diskussionsleitung (ca. 30 Min.) Prüfungsleistung wird vor Kursbeginn im Vorlesungskommentar/UniVZ bekannt gegeben.

What We Will Do:

We will practice short presentations - including speeches and talks previously prepared at home as well as spontaneous impromptu presentations that will enhance students' communicative flexibility. In addition, active class discussions on topics of interest to students will be an integral element of the tutorial. Conversations will be on a conversational as well as on an academic/scientific level. Practical assignments will play a primary role, but will be complemented with theoretical instruction on the areas we will cover. Course contents will be flexible to address the specific needs of the group.

The Overall Goals:

- to significantly increase students' confidence when participating actively in class discussions and giving talks in English in front of larger audiences in an academic setting
- to address aspects of correct pronunciation, grammar and vocabulary giving students the tools to express themselves in an accurate, precise and clear manner
- to learn how to give well-structured presentations which are easy and interesting to follow
- to develop the ability to make up clear and logical arguments and thereby acquire a persuasive argumentation style
- to expand students' spontaneity, creativity and flexibility in class discussions
- to learn how to effectively deal with nervousness and stress

Zielgruppe

The Target Group:

This course is aimed at all MA students in their first and second semesters who have had little or no chance of speaking English in their previous degree programs and who therefore have difficulties in particular areas pertaining to oral English.

This course will cover a range of strategies for improving your reading skills, such as speed and detailed reading, and skimming and scanning practice; it will also cover listening skills, such as following longer talks on unfamiliar topics and coping with different accents. We will answer various types of comprehension questions, take notes, write summaries and learn new vocabulary by engaging with contemporary issues. For that purpose, we will draw on both digital and print media (NPR, BBC, TED and The Guardian, The

New York Times, The Washington Post etc.), which will serve as our material. There will be a final exam.

Kommentar	On November 11, 2018, the centenary of Armistice Day - the day when World War One ended - will be commemorated all over the world. It holds a special place in the British cultural memory, because it shaped the forms in which future wars would be remembered. This lecture series will look at the ways in which both world wars were experienced, imagined, performed and reflected in British poetry, novels, autobiographies and films, and how they were remembered in cultural practices. Topics include war myths, war propaganda and anti-propaganda, the role of women, British masculinity and national identity (eg. "Two World Wars, One World Cup"), the representation of the wars and their iconographies in the British public sphere, as well as war parodies, war re-enactments and war tourism.

A "Required Reading" list for BA and MA students will be available on StudIP.

Kommentar	Dealing with such a simple product only consisting of ink on paper, the book or literature industry has played a critical role in enabling the world to advance to how we know it today. Driven by new technologies and influenced by various factors, it is undergoing change today. This course will examine the literature industry, from its beginnings until today, the factors, which helped shape it and its underlying practices; aiming to answer the overall question: What is the business of literature? We will begin by looking at the relationships of authors, readers and texts. Dealing with theoretical background, we will also look at how it developed historically. Furthermore, this course will also provide an overview of the buying, selling and writing of books as well as its close ties with marketing and consumption of literature such as literary festivals, book towns and others.

This course is taught as a Blockseminar. Therefore, please reserve the following dates: An introduction meeting will be held on October 19 2018 from 2-4pm; followed by class meetings on 23./24. November 2018, 14./15. December 2018 and 18./19. January 2019. At present a schedule of Friday afternoons and Saturday full days is planned.

All students are expected to attend each session and to give a presentation in class as part of a group work.

Kommentar

Windrush fiction deals with the lives and fortunes of Caribbean immigrants to England after the WWII. The first of these immigrants arrived in England in 1948 on the passenger liner Empire Windrush that lent its name to an entire generation. Hoping for better lives and better prospects, the immigrants were needed in Britain in order to rebuild the country after WWII. However, as they were soon to find out, British society was not ready for their arrival and encountered them mainly with racism and discrimination that have lasted until today. Following the recent political scandal affecting the so-called "Windrush" generation, many of whom were declared illegal immigrants overnight, the class will address their history and literature as well as their participation in Black identity politics in Britain. We shall read Sam Selvon, Lonely Londoners (1957), Andrea Levy, Small Island (2004), and texts from the anniversary anthology edited by Onyekachi Wambu, Empire Windrush: Fifty Years of Writing About Black Britain (1998). Please read Selvon's and Levy's novels in advance. Further reading will be available in Stud.IP before the beginning of the term. Attendance in the first session is obligatory.

Registration in StudIP: 1 September - 1 October.

Kommentar Im Mittelpunkt dieses Seminars stehen Versuche, den Norden, hier Grönland sowie der arktische Raum Kanadas, zu erzählen. Zur Untersuchung ausgewählter literarischer Texte und Filme sollen theoretische Ansätze u.a. aus der Imagologie, der Narratologie und den postkolonialen Studien (Kirsten Thisted, "Arktischer Orientalismus") herangezogen werden. Bearbeitet werden insbesondere folgende Themengebiete: Bilder des Nordens; die Rekonstruktion stereotyper Vorstellungen; Mensch und Umgebung; die europäische Sichtweise auf nördliche Landschaften; der Umgang mit der indigenen Bevölkerung.

Zu den Texten und Filmen, die wir diskutieren möchten, gehören folgende: ausgewählte Lyrik, Short Stories und Cartoons zum Norden Kanadas; Rudy Wiebe, A Discovery of Strangers (1994)[Roman], Atanarjuat: The Fast Runner (2001)[Film], Elizabeth Hay, Late Nights on the Air (2007)[Roman]; Peter Høeg: Frøken Smillas fornemmelse for sne (1992) [Roman; deutsch: Fräulein Smillas Gespür für Schnee]; Kim Leine: Profeterne i Ewigheitsfjorden (2012), [Roman; deutsch: Ewigkeitsfjord]; Per Kirkeby: Grønlandstekster (2012) [Tagebuchaufzeichnungen; *In Grönland. In this seminar we will look at the two world wars from an unusual angle, focusing less on Eurocentric or Europe-centred versions of these historical events than on war events that happened in or were perceived from the peripheries. The narratives to be explored address, for instance, war-related action not only in Europe but also in the Far East or North America, they concentrate e.g. on Australian nurses, Maori soldiers, or Japanese Canadian internees, or they highlight, as one of the consequences of the wars, the establishment and spread of a memorial culture. Among the topics we will investigate in our discussions are the following: the fictional representations of historical characters, settings, and events; the historical events as seen from a postcolonial perspective; and the re-appropriation of voice through revisiting imaginatively the past.

Readings: Thomas Keneally, The Daughters of Mars (2012); Jane Urquhart, The Stone Carvers (2001); Patricia Grace, Tu (2004); Richard Flanagan, The Narrow Road to the Deep North (2014); Frances Itani, Requiem (2011); Mary Ann Shaffer, The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society (2008).

However, as they were soon to find out, British society was not ready for their arrival and encountered them mainly with racism and discrimination that have lasted until today. Following the recent political scandal affecting the so-called "Windrush" generation, many of whom were declared illegal immigrants overnight, the class will address their history and literature as well as their participation in Black identity politics in Britain. We shall read Sam Selvon, Lonely Londoners (1957), Andrea Levy, Small Island (2004), and texts from the anniversary anthology edited by Onyekachi Wambu, Empire Windrush: Fifty Years of Writing About Black Britain (1998). Please read Selvon's and Levy's novels in advance. Further reading will be available in Stud.IP before the beginning of the term. Attendance in the first session is obligatory.

Registration in StudIP: 1 September - 1 October.

Kommentar	Im Mittelpunkt dieses Seminars stehen Versuche, den Norden, hier Grönland sowie der arktische Raum Kanadas, zu erzählen. Zur Untersuchung ausgewählter literarischer Texte und Filme sollen theoretische Ansätze u.a. aus der Imagologie, der Narratologie und den postkolonialen Studien (Kirsten Thisted, "Arktischer Orientalismus") herangezogen werden. Bearbeitet werden insbesondere folgende Themengebiete: Bilder des Nordens; die Rekonstruktion stereotyper Vorstellungen; Mensch und Umgebung; die europäische Sichtweise auf nördliche Landschaften; der Umgang mit der indigenen Bevölkerung. Zu den Texten und Filmen, die wir diskutieren möchten, gehören folgende: ausgewählte Lyrik, Short Stories und Cartoons zum Norden Kanadas; Rudy Wiebe, A Discovery of Strangers (1994)[Roman], Atanarjuat: The Fast Runner (2001)[Film], Elizabeth Hay, Late Nights on the Air (2007)[Roman]; Peter Høeg: Frøken Smillas fornemmelse for sne (1992) [Roman; deutsch: Fräulein Smillas Gespür für Schnee]; Kim Leine: Profeterne i Ewigheidsfjorden (2012), [Roman; deutsch: Ewigkeitsfjord]; Per Kirkeby: Grønlandstekster (2012) [Tagebuchaufzeichnungen; In Grönland. Kommentar	When Samuel Johnson criticised John Donne for "the most heterogeneous ideas yoked together", he might have been thinking about Donne's poem "The Flea". Here the speaker argues that a lady should make love with him because the flea, which had just bitten them both, already unites their blood in its body. As this union is commonly not regarded as a sin, why should their love-making be? Poems such as these are typical for "The Metaphysicals", a group of poets (John Donne, Andrew Marvell, George Herbert, Thomas Carew and others) who explored life's dualities in subtle and argumentative poetry, trying to resolve the dichotomies of body and soul, passion and reason, carnal and divine, time and eternity or sin and redemption into unity or at least a compromise. Their works, written in the early seventeenth century, are distinguished by their intellectual complexity, concise expression, and often surprising, even shocking images.

This course will introduce students to a diverse range of metaphysical poets and their works, contextualise them in the religious and intellectual debates of the seventeenth century, and address their reception history.

Readings: Seventeenth-Century British Poetry, 1603-1660. ed. Gregory Chaplin and John P. Rumrich, Norton Critical Edition, 2006.

Kommentar

Genealogical narratives belong to the oldest literary formats, reflecting the human need to know about one's origin. Equally important is genealogy in law: in the Judaeo-Christian tradition, ancestry and kinship are synonymous with blood relations. This traditional understanding of kinship has become contested not only recently by new reproduction technologies. The institution of adoption has always served as an exemplary practice to define kinship outside biological determinism. This course, co-taught by Professor Kroppenberg (History of Law) and Professor Schaff (British Literature) will discuss twentieth-century adoption narratives from the perspectives of law and literature, exploring the representation of kinship and identity. Students are invited to join interdisciplinary tandem teams, looking at the texts (novels and poetry) from a legal as well as a literary angle. Although some of the texts were not originally written in English, all are available in English translations. Please note however, that the course may involve some discussions in German, and therefore a good command of spoken German is recommended.

Readings: Atwood, Margaret: The Handmaid's Tale (1985); Brodkey, Harold: Stories in an Almost Classical Mode (1988); Drabble, Margaret: The Red Queen - A Transcultural Tragicomedy (2004); Ginzburg, Natalia: Le voci della sera (1961); Huston, Nancy: Lignes de faille (2006)/Fault Lines (2007); July, Miranda: The First Bad Man (2015); Kay, Jackie: The Adoption Papers (1991); Millás, Juan José: Dos mujeres en Praga (2002); White, Patrick: The Vivisector (1970); Winterson, Jeanette: Oranges Are Not the Only Fruit (1985).

Kommentar	In this seminar we will look at the two world wars from an unusual angle, focusing less on Eurocentric or Europe-centred versions of these historical events than on war events that happened in or were perceived from the peripheries. The narratives to be explored address, for instance, war-related action not only in Europe but also in the Far East or North America, they concentrate e.g. on Australian nurses, Maori soldiers, or Japanese Canadian internees, or they highlight, as one of the consequences of the wars, the establishment and spread of a memorial culture. Among the topics we will investigate in our discussions are the following: the fictional representations of historical characters, settings, and events; the historical events as seen from a postcolonial perspective; and the re-appropriation of voice through revisiting imaginatively the past. Readings: Thomas Keneally, The Daughters of Mars (2012); Jane Urquhart, The Stone Carvers (2001); Patricia Grace, Tu (2004); Richard Flanagan, The Narrow Road to the Deep North (2014); Frances Itani, Requiem (2011); Mary Ann Shaffer, The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society (2008).

Module	M.EP.10f.Pf: Anglophone Literature and Culture: A Critical Survey (Portfolio)
Bemerkung	Note that this is a reading- and work-intensive course. The module is worth a total of 12 credits, and it is expected that you have enough time for reading and research during the semester; please allow yourself 6 to 8 hours per week for that.
Kommentar	The aim of this unit is to help students deepen and broaden their understanding of core texts, themes and ideas in British literature and culture through a step-by-step analysis of both set texts and extended reading options. Thus, students do not only "learn the texts" and develop a critical understanding of how they work and how they relate to each other, they also - and most prominently - acquire skills in coming to grips with the texts in a period stuffed with changes: how to distinguish between important and unimportant developments, how to quickly gain a working survey knowledge of them, how to critically contrast literary elements and their uses. For further information, please visit http://www.gwdg.de/~freitem/videos/criticalsurvey-ssu.mp4, or take a sneak peek at the Insights version of the unit at https://openiliias.uni-goettingen.de (choose "public courses"/"Öffentliche Kurse", then Philosophische Fakultät, and click through to the Anglophone Literature division - no registration necessary!). Registration: Registration is through StudIP (from Sept 1).

Module	B.EP.203a.Mp: Anglophone Literature and Culture IV
Kommentar	Are you interested in the history of English literature? If you are a BA student, this course expects you to have completed module B.EP.202 Anglophone Literature and Culture II as a prerequisite. MA students usually have covered periods in English literary history in their previous degree programme. Are you now hooked on - or at least interested in - knowing more about English literature, its key texts, key authors and what makes them canonical? This self-study unit is designed to broaden and deepen your knowledge of two periods in the history of English literature with the help of books on literary history and anthologies. In particular, you will get a good overview of each period you are tackling, with in-depth information on what shapes the period itself, on authors and their texts, and on the developments within genres. At the same time you will experience that books on history are nothing to be afraid of - indeed, they can be positively enjoyable. (Not all of them are, but we will skirt around the ones that are extremely boring, prosy or ancient!)

Note that this is a self-study unit. It expects students to work on their own, or in groups of two or three students. It is not a course that is taught on a weekly basis though it is organized around tasks to be completed on a week-by-week basis. Communication and feedback will be by email and in one-on-two meetings on Thursday mornings. As such, this course expects quite an amount of self-discipline on the part of the participants - but fear not, the unit is structured in such a way as to help you cope with this if you are willing to put some work in! For more information, visit or take a sneak peek at the Insights version of the unit at

<http://www.gwdg.de/~freitem/videos/periods-ssu.mp4>,

<https://openilias.uni-goettingen.de>

(choose "public courses"/"Öffentliche Kurse", then Philosophische Fakultät, and click through to the Anglophone Literature division - no registration necessary!).

Optional first meeting (introduction, requirements, organization, accessing texts): Mon Oct 15, 2018, 6.15pm, SEP Übungsraum (0.247).

Required reading for the first meeting: to be announced.
